

PMEA Supports Physical Education Credit for Marching Band Participation

The Pennsylvania General Assembly should pass legislation allowing students that participate in high school marching band to receive physical education course credits. Other states (Alabama, Florida, Illinois, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nevada, Ohio, Tennessee, and Texas) have policies in place that allow for at least some credit for student participation in marching band in place of a physical education credit. Local boards of education would determine if their local education agency would offer such a credit.

Context:

Students participating in high school marching band programs are as physically active as students participating in interscholastic athletic programs. In many places, a marching band season is longer than any individual sports season. The physical demands and expectations placed on marching band students can meet and exceed requirements of a physical education course.

As Pennsylvania has standards in subject areas, including physical education, any legislation should require the adherence of standards in physical education for any marching band credit awarded. Local education agencies would have the option to decide if they would offer this credit in their schools. A blanket state mandate is not our goal, rather we hope the General Assembly would give schools the option to decide to implement this credit program as they see fit.

One goal of this proposal is to ease the burden of music students that are often forced to make a choice between music courses and other areas of study because there is a limited amount of course time during the school day. By allowing a marching band student the option to receive course credit for another subject (while fulfilling the requirements of that subject in marching band), student will have more opportunities to study other courses offered in their school.

Other states have realized that marching band participation can satisfy physical education requirements. Now is the time for Pennsylvania to realize that as well.

Examples from Other States

Here are examples of policies from other states allowing for physical education credit for marching band participation. While each state offers a different approach, we would like Pennsylvania to allow local education agencies to adopt their own policies allowing for marching band participation to count for physical education credit.
